Julio is stuck buying off-brand bootleg figures from his favorite shows, as he doesn't know where to get the high-quality figures he wants.

Julio has tried countless sites, but they all don't have the figures he wants and if they do they are very low quality and often don't look like the character depicted.

During Julio's study abroad semester in Japan, he was able to find special and authentic figures he would've never found in the states. After his semester was over, he brought back as many figures as he could, but he still wanted more from Japan. If only he had a website to find imports!

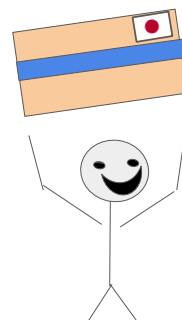

Julio asks his friend Jesse where he buys his character figures, Jesse refers him to a website that finds direct imports from Japan and other countries.

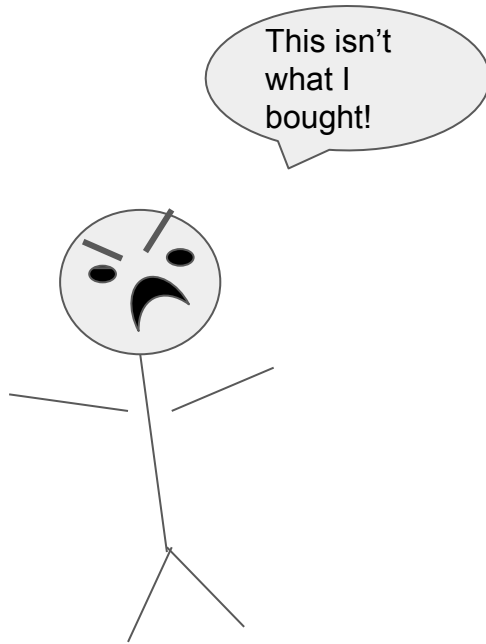

Julio cannot contain his excitement of being able to buy actual figures and at an affordable price, he prepares his wallet to buy as many figures as he wants. Unfortunately, Julio is a broke college student, so he was only able to buy one figure.

Julio's figure has finally arrived and he cannot contain his excitement. Julio is very glad and appreciative of the website his friend recommended to him.

Nicole has been working at Starbucks for six months now. She goes to work every other day after school. Nicole tries to save her earnings, but often finds herself emptying her bank account on her hobbies.

How does Nicole spend all her money? Nicole loves making art and her supplies can be quite expensive. Nicole especially loves Japanese art brands, such as COPIC markers. These are often difficult to find in the United States.

Nicole's school sponsors an annual art contest. Winners of the contest get to have their art published in the school's yearly calendar. Nicole really wants to create a submission, but for her idea to work she needs a special set of brush pens.

Nicole's art teacher suggests that she download our app, Japanese Imports Search. Nicole's teacher uses the app to source quality art supplies for reasonable prices. Nicole decides to look for the brush pens on the app.

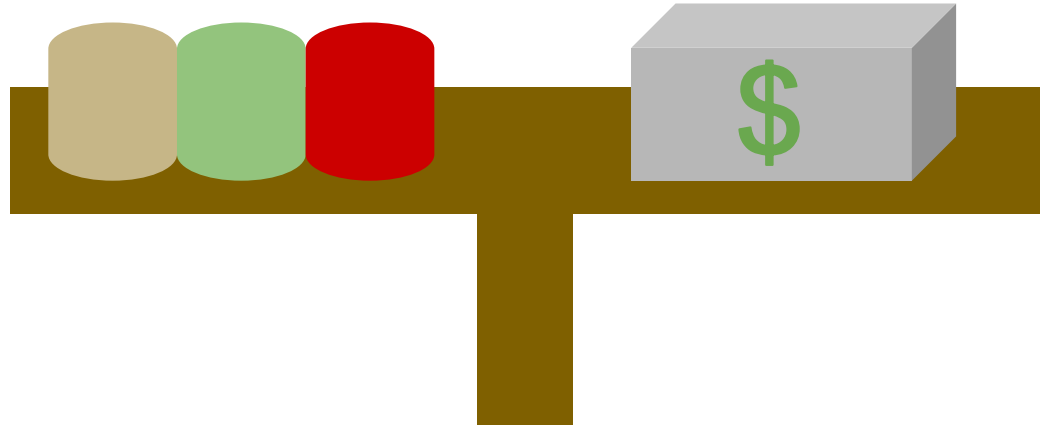

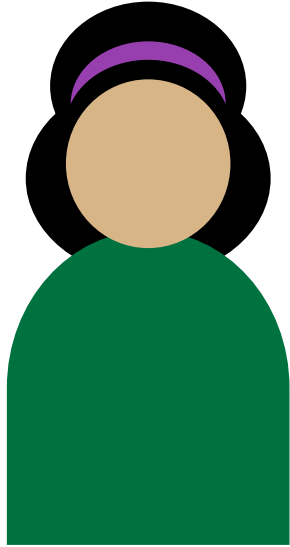

Nicole uses the app's search function to find results for "brush pens." Using reviews, she selects the best brand, and even notices that there's a deal on the product! Nicole quickly orders the set so she'll be ready to create her masterpiece.

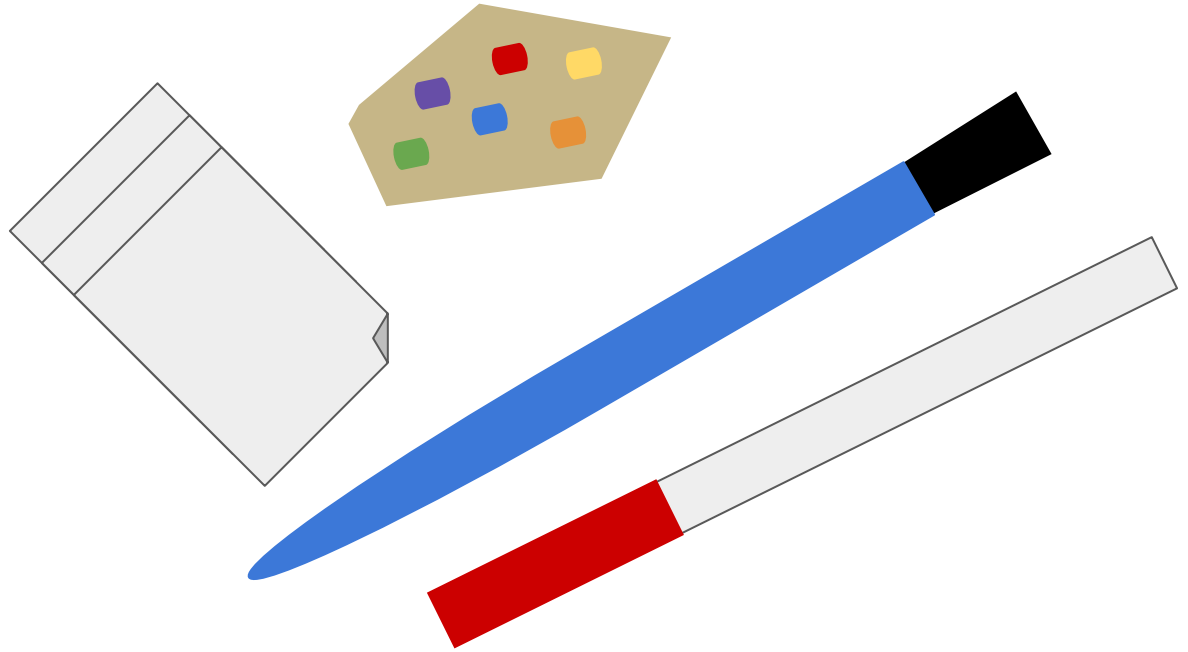

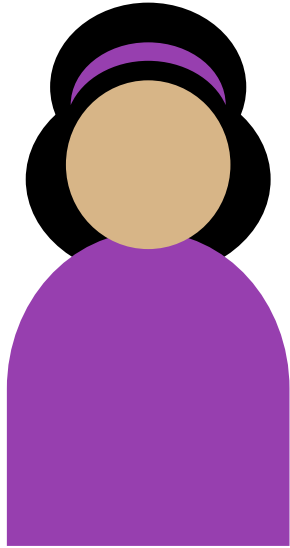

Nicole's set arrives on time and she begins crafting her submission. The judges award her work first place! All thanks to her handy brush pens!

Oh No! Tsutomo has spilled green tea on his tatami style wallpaper in his apartment, ruining the wallpaper!

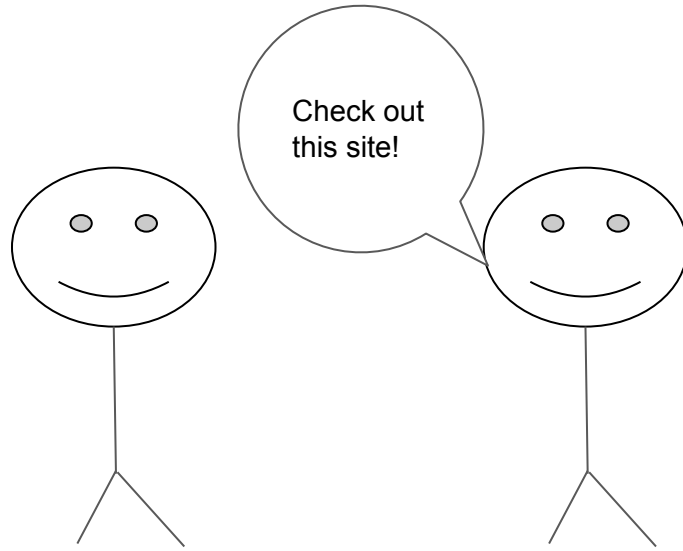

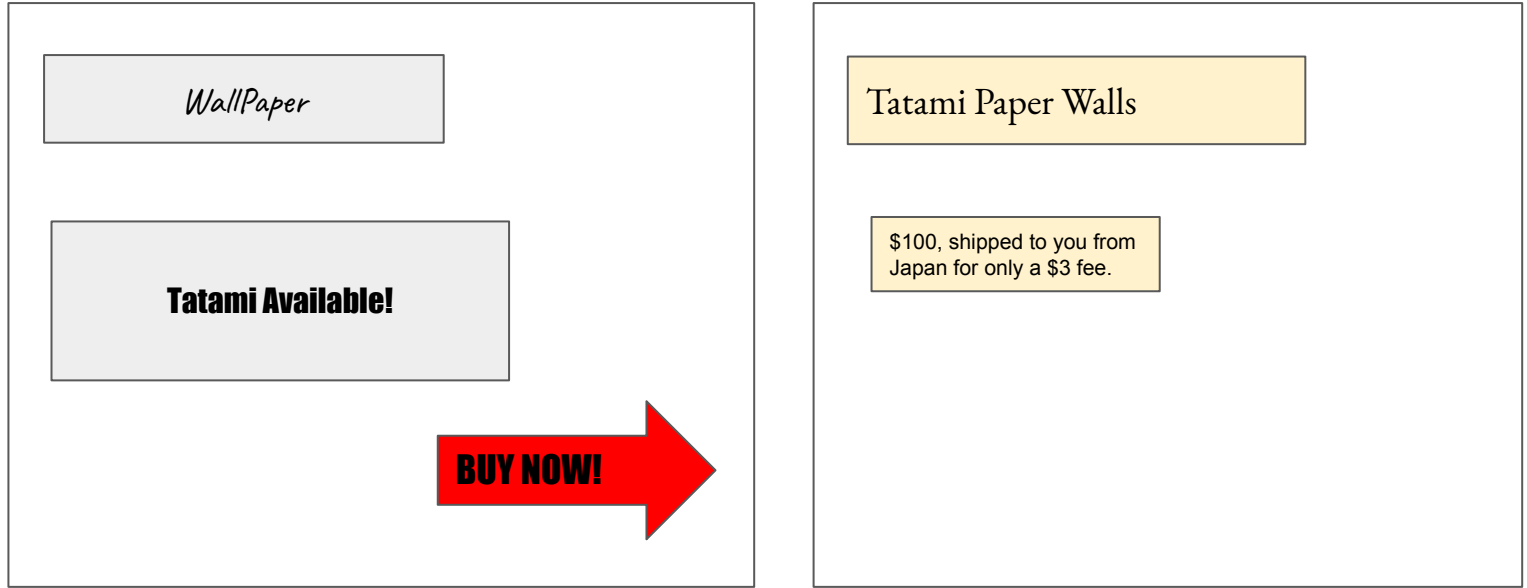

Tsutomo goes to his local housing goods store, only to find that his favorite tatami wallpaper is no longer being carried by the store!

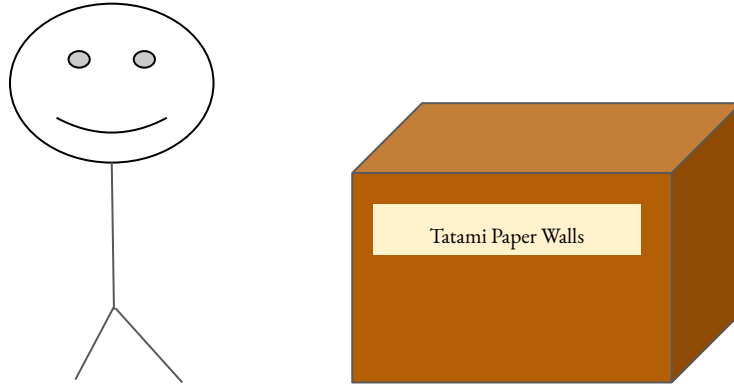

Tsutomo looks online for the wallpaper, but can only find it being sold for prices three times what he is used to paying!
Tsutomo is feeling discouraged and upset, as this wallpaper helps to make him feel at home in America.

The next day at work, Tsutomo hears from a fellow Japanese coworker about a new site that helps with finding the best prices for importing Japanese items.

Tsutomo logs onto the site after work and finds the tatami wallpaper he is looking for and is redirected to a site where the wallpaper will be bought in Japan and shipped to him. The wallpaper is priced the same as he is used to paying with only a $3 fee for the import service!

Tsutomo orders the tatami wallpaper, and it arrives in two weeks. Tsutomo is very satisfied with this tool he can use in his search for Japanese goods.
